

HELLO

March

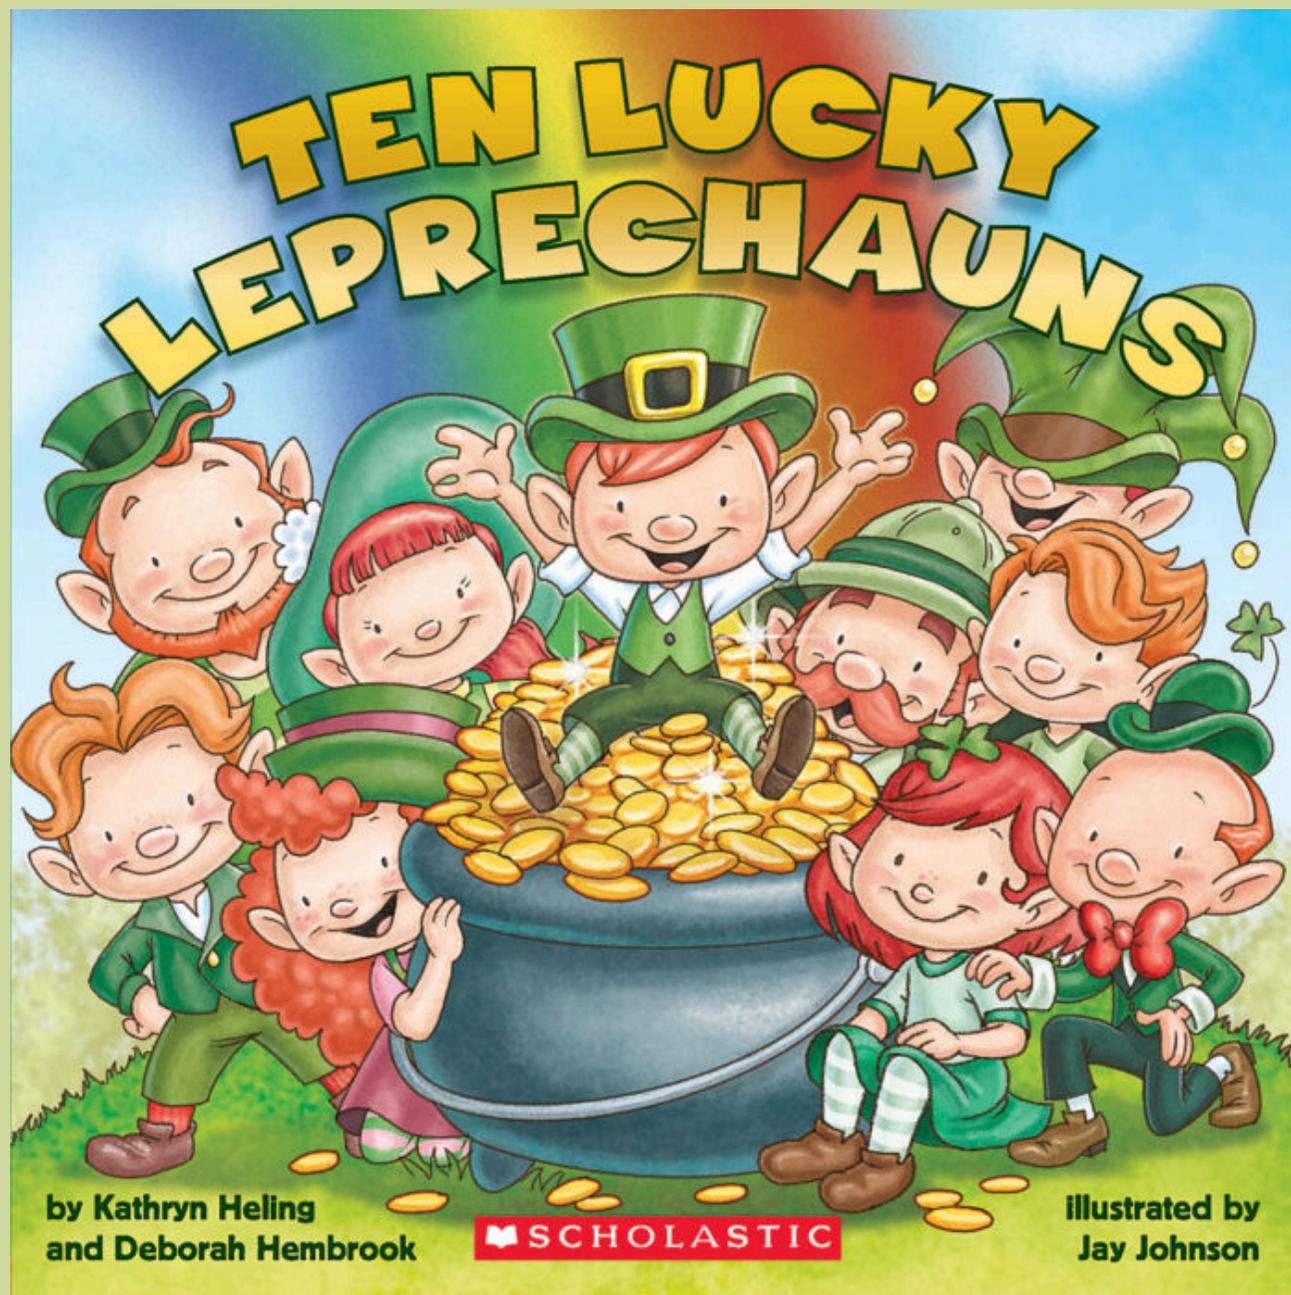

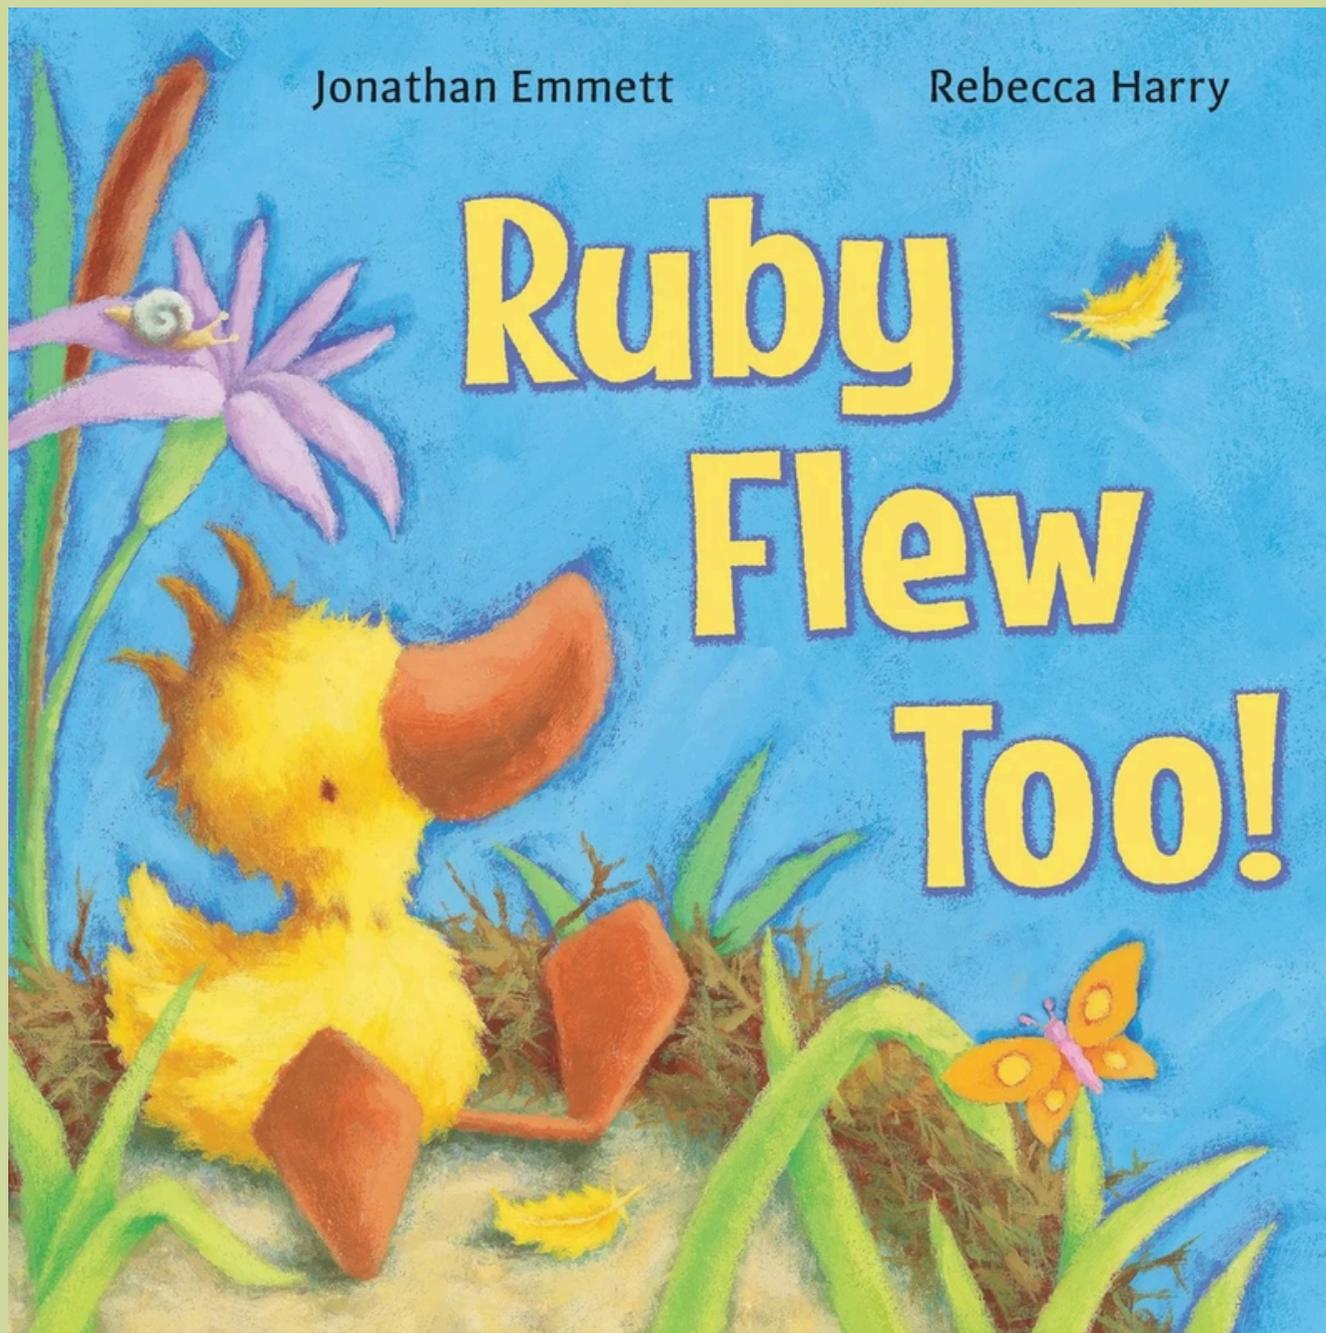

This book is part of the “How to Catch a” series and it perfect for St. Patrick’s Day. It offers opportunities for extensions such as writing and STEM, as children can plan and create their own leprechaun trap!

We love to add in a nonfiction book whenever we can! With the start of spring this month, this book is perfect for March. It has rich language for vocabulary development and ties into a focus on the changing of seasons.

This is such a fun March themed book that practices math skills (without your little learner even knowing it!). We also love the predictable pattern of the text so kids can chime in once they know the words.

This spring book about adorable ducklings ties well into Social Emotional Learning. It focuses on how not everyone learns at the same time or the same rate, but with time, everyone can succeed. This is especially important at the age of learning to read and write, which is why this is a favorite!
